Willingboro High School Makes State Target for the first time in 'No Child Left Behind' (NCLB) Era

By Dr. Ronald G. Taylor, Superintendent of Schools

Dr. Taylor announced, during January's State of the District Address, that Willingboro High School made New Jersey State Academic Target's for the first time since the enacting of the 2001 'No Child Left Behind' (NCLB) Federal Law. After a detailed review of Willingboro High School's State Proficiency Assessment (HSPA) results, he found that the percentage of Willingboro High School students' proficient in Language Arts had grown from 53% during the 2009-2010 school year to 82% during the 2011-2012 school year (SY). In the same time frame, Willingboro High School students' proficiency in Mathematics had grown from 22% to 49%. This increase in student achievement has earned Willingboro High School the 'Meeting Progress Targets' designation in both Mathematics and Language Arts for the first time in the 12-year history of the 'No Child Left Behind' Law. Willingboro High School's Progress Targets, (formerly known as Adequate Yearly Progress [AYP]), are based on the New Jersey Department of Education's (NJDOE) formula to monitor, and promote advancement towards a goal of 95% proficiency, for all students in all monitored subject areas.

The Willingboro School District credits several factors for this academic growth to include but not limited to: Block Scheduling implementation (a methodology that doubles the amount of instruction time students receive in each class per day); increased accountability for students through transcript audits, the District's new Pupil Code of Conduct; the dedication of hard-working teachers and administrative staff at Willingboro High School. The New Jersey Department of Education recently categorized our high school as a 'Focus School'. This classification was due to low graduation rates, as determined by the relatively new Adjusted Cohort Graduation Rate formula, which is now being used to calculate graduation rates for high schools in the state of New Jersey. Any school receiving the designation of 'Focus School' is required to address identified areas of concern via the implementation of school improvement efforts documented in a mandated School Improvement Plan (SIP). During the first year of school improvement efforts, the high school's leadership team implemented an improvement plan which called for professional development of staff, and the establishment of management teams tasked with the responsibility of addressing conduct, attendance, and academic issues in a systematic fashion. In preparation for the 2013-2014 Cohort of students, the high school leadership team is currently engaged in planning efforts for the SY 2013-2014 SIP. The new plan will outline required actions to create career academies within our high school, allowing academic choices for students with the goal to ensure that a greater percentage of our pupils graduate ready for college and careers.

Dr. Ronald G. Taylor, Superintendent of Schools, has commented, "... our academic improvements are commendable, however, our work is far from done as we strive to be the number one school option for parents in our community." The Willingboro School District has implemented several initiatives to improve student achievement during Dr. Taylor's tenure to include: Consolidating Levitt Junior High School and Memorial Upper Elementary School into the "New" Memorial Middle School serving students in 6th- 8th grade. This will result in fewer transitions as students move through the K-12 continuum; Swing-space utilization to minimize disruption during the $67 Million school renovations project; Procurement of more than $500,000 in new textbooks for a District wide adoption; as well as a new curriculum adoption for all grades Kindergarten through 12th. With the implementation of insightful ideas and feedback gleaned from strategic planning with community stakeholders, Willingboro Public Schools are poised for even greater success in SY 2013-2014.

BCC's GED Test Center is key to opening a world of opportunity

By Margo Harvey, BCC Marketing & Communications Specialist

For residents who never earned their high school diploma, the first door to opportunity is often the GED® Test Center located at Burlington County College's (BCC) Willingboro Center, 200 Campbell Dr., Suite 201. As the only official testing center for all of Burlington County, BCC administers approximately 700 tests each year.

The chance at earning an education came unexpectedly for one Burlington Township resident, John Doyle. After 20 years in the construction business, Doyle was laid off due to the recession.

The 42-year-old signed up for GED prep classes at BCC and within three months, Doyle had earned his GED and the chance to pursue a higher education at BCC.

"They [BCC's Adult Basic Education staff] encouraged me to further my education," Doyle said.

"I had the fear that I would be the oldest student, but that was not the case at all. I've helped the younger students and they have helped me. I think that is why I enjoy BCC so much," he said. "It has been the total college experience."

After Doyle completes his general education courses, he is looking forward to enrolling in BCC's Culinary Arts Program. "I like to cook and eat, I'm not a desk person. I've always been on the move," he said.

"The teachers at BCC really helped reprogram my thinking. I was always frustrated that I wasn't as skilled academically, but that is no longer the case. I just earned an 'A' in English 101."

Doyle hopes to transfer to a four-year university after getting his associate degree from BCC.

Willingboro resident Marie LaFrance, originally from Haiti, credits Ms. Valerie, Ms. Mildred and Ms. Keturah, BCC's Adult Basic Education (ABE) staff, for helping her succeed.

"When I saw my placement scores I wanted to give up. I thought, maybe I can't do this. But they pushed and encouraged me and prepared me for the GED test," said LaFrance.

Currently enrolled in BCC's nursing program, 51-year-old LaFrance sought the opportunity to pursue her dream career after being laid off from retail sales. "After 25 years I had to start all over," she said.

"The ABE staff really helped speed up the whole process. I was ready to take the GED test in August and I was enrolled at BCC and taking classes by the end of August."

LaFrance plans to continue to pursue her education and eventually land her dream job working with children as a nurse.

"This is my time, my chance—I want to take it and run with it," she concluded.

Doyle's and LaFrance's stories are not unusual. According to the GED Testing Service, the creators of the official GED test, nearly 800,000 adults sat for their GED last year. The current test series, the 2002 Series GED® Test, has five parts: reading, writing, mathematics, science and social studies.

Testing centers across the country are encouraging those who may have passed part of the test to complete all sections by the end of the year. A new GED test will be launched in 2014 and as a result, the current test scores for those who have not finished all the sections of the test will expire. According to Nicole

Chestang, Executive Vice President of the GED Testing Service, "more than a million adults have started, but not finished the current GED test."

Willingboro resident Kelly Williams is currently taking ABE classes in preparation for the GED Test, which he plans to take in June.

"I needed it for better opportunities, whether that means going back to school or getting a better career," said Williams. "I want to further myself."

The 36-year old finds the ABE classes beneficial for students who have been out of school for several years. "Everyone gets the help they need when they need it," he said.

"I hope to one day own my own fashion business. I've been doing it since I was little," Williams said. "I know the GED test is my first step in getting there."

BCC provides free support to residents who wish to finish and pass the test. ABE programs are open for immediate enrollment. Residents interested in taking the GED test, should call BCC at 609-894-9311, ext. 3079 or 3016 or visit www.finishtheGED.com.

Spring and Summer Home Safety Tips

By Mark A. Robertson Sr.

The spring and summer seasons are upon us and now is the time when we all enjoy spending more time at our homes and on the roadways. Whether it's the annual "spring cleaning", an afternoon barbecue in the backyard, or a leisurely bike ride, safety should never take a vacation. In this article you will find several tips on helping make your home, social events, and travels safe.

Gasoline and propane are both staples around our homes during the spring and summer. These products are helpful in maintaining our homes and entertaining our guests during outdoor activities, however, they can be dangerous if used incorrectly. The following are safety tips for the use of gasoline and propane around the home.

Gasoline:

1. Keep gasoline out of children's sight and reach. Children should never handle gasoline.

2. Do not use or store gasoline near possible ignition sources (i.e., electrical devices, or gas-fired appliances, or any other device that contains a pilot flame or will spark), and only store gasoline outside the home (i.e., in a garage or lawn shed) in an approved tightly closed metal or plastic container, not beyond fuel line.

3. Never use gasoline inside the home or as a cleaning agent. Clean up spills promptly and discard clean-up materials properly. Do not smoke when handling gasoline.

Propane:

1. Never store or use propane gas cylinders larger than one pound inside the home. Larger cylinders should be stored in a garden type shed, away from the home.

2. Never operate a propane-powered gas grill inside the home.

3. Carefully follow all manufacturers' instructions when lighting propane-powered equipment

Lightning is a powerful natural phenomenon that occurs year round, but especially during the summer months. Over 20,000 fires are caused annually by lightning strikes. These fires also cause over 10 deaths and 40 injuries a year, and over $400 million in direct property damage. Here are some precautions to take when you notice lightning in your area.

1. If you can hear thunder, you are within striking distance of lightning. Seek shelter inside a home, large building, or a hard-topped vehicle right away. Do not go under trees for shelter. There is no place outside that is safe during a thunderstorm. Wait at least 30 minutes after the last thunder before leaving your shelter.

2. Stay away from windows and doors. If you are in or on open water go to land and seek shelter indoors.

3. If you feel your hair stand on end, that means lightning is about to strike, squat low to the ground on the balls of your feet. Place your hands over your ears and your head between your knees. Make yourself the smallest target possible and minimize your contact with the ground

The spring season is a great time of the year to rid your home of excess items. Items that are in good condition can be sold at a garage sale or flea market. Items that are broken or unsafe should be thrown away or properly recycled. Excess materials in the home can lead to safety concerns for owners and firefighters:

1. Excess materials can block exits and prevent escape from the home. In addition, people can be injured when they trip over things or when materials fall on them.

2. Responding firefighters can be put at risk due to obstructed exits, falling objects, and excessive fire loading that can lead to collapse. This excess of items also makes fighting fires and searching for occupants far more difficult.

Each year approximately 20 children ages 14 and under died in bicycle-related incidents, and more than 236,000 are injured. Head injury is the leading cause of death in bicycle crashes. A collision with a motor vehicle causes nearly 90 percent of bicycle-related deaths. One hundred seventy-nine children ages 14 and under died in 2005 from pedestrian injuries (crossing the street, etc.). Nearly 27,500 children received emergency room treatment for pedestrian injuries every year. Some tips to help keep our children safe include:

1. Children under 10 should ride on sidewalks or safe areas only like a bike path. Teens may ride in the street, riding with traffic, after they learn the rules of the road.

2. Require children (and adults) to wear a helmet whenever riding a bike, scooter, skateboard, or in-line skate

3. Teach children to always come to a complete stop before entering a driveway, path or sidewalk. Look left, right, and left again for other bikes, cars, or pedestrians.

4. Children under 10 should never cross a street alone. Grown-ups and older children should be role models and set a positive example by practicing safe street-crossing rules.

5. Teach children how to cross the street. Stop at the curb or edge of the

The Wellspring of Emotions

By Harry W. Kendall

Not satisfied with life; day simply drags into night; living is one huge bore? Why not choose a path of wisdom—seek knowledge of the whole self. Reading/ studying and meditating into deep levels of personal being are excellent means for expanding one's intellectual capacity. It will help build a platform for communicating with peers about the world in and about each one of us. This will lead to contemplative inquiry of self—one's complete being, mortal and immortal. Being able to discriminate between these two aspects of life is a necessary task for any wisdom-seeker. On this path one will sooner or later come to realize that every individual is endowed with the necessary instruments, a body, a mind, senses, and a consciousness to understand and use them for whatever one's desired goal.

This piece is a continuation of an earlier writing of this series, Introspection, in which Ye Scribe encouraged each individual to view his/her progression through life as if writing a novel of self. It begged the question of how the piece would read. Hopefully each author is writing (developing each page) daily by doing her/his best at living a balanced and fruitful life. This is a matter of raising one's consciousness—learning while progressing through life acquiring knowledge of body, mind and sense functions as they are stimulated by and dependent upon action. Actions are the result of thought. Thoughts are conceived by emotions; emotions stem from desire; desires arise from four primal urges all humans as well as creatures share—food, sex, sleep and self-preservation respectively. These are motivating factors of which humans, unlike creatures, have the ability to manage, even though some persons lack torment, though not realizing the ignorance there of is a problem. How well can one expect to prosper if she or he cannot comprehend their basic needs?

Each distinct urge is too complex for a discussion in this limited space, except to highlight certain aspects of the four. As anyone can see, eating too much is a major problem in America. A primary cause is not giving one's body the nutrition it needs. The more one over-eats disagreeable food, the more the need for from individual to individual, but any person can train him or herself to regulate food as well as sex appetites.

The sex drive in animals is controlled by nature. In humans it depends more on stimulated senses—appeal, urge, drive and satisfaction—the result of which should be a calm energizing. Obsessions or brooding on one's sexuality leads to over indulgence and emotional instability.

When the part of one's conscious mind that functions with the external world grows weary of pressures and fatigues, the body becomes tired and the need for sleep arises. Strengthen one's willpower by making up the mind to sleep and awaken voluntarily.

Self preservation is a natural tendency to protect one's self; fear being foremost in this drive. Deepest in the minds of many humans is the fear of dying, which need not be. The adage, knowledge dispels darkness, means that acquiring knowledge of the immortal self will reveal how life is eternal; death is not the end, it is merely closing one door and opening another.

The end

Who do I contact when a neighbor’s property is not being kept up to the standard of the other properties on the streets?

When you are experiencing any property maintenance issue contact the Inspections Department at (609) 877-2200 Extension 1033.

Beginning this spring there will be a major push to enforce the Property Maintenance Codes. The appearance of our neighborhoods is important and we hear our citizens asking for stricter enforcement of the codes. I urge you to take a discerning look at your property and devise a plan to paint that fence or repair that gutter that is hanging off the house. Get out and clean the weeds from the flower bed and pick up the paper that has blown in bushes. Maybe you need to resurface that fading driveway. Remember that trash cans should not be stored in front of the house and should not go out until the night before your pick-up date. Don’t wait for the Inspector to issue a notice, get out and start those repairs today.

May I get a telephone or E-mail reminder that my quarterly taxes are due?

Yes. You may receive a reminder via telephone, cell phone and or email from the Township. Please let us know if you would like to be reminded by completing the form below and return it to: Willingboro Tax Office, One Rev. Dr. M. L. King, Jr. Drive, Willingboro, NJ 08046. You may also fill out the form at the Tax Office window or online www.willingboronj.gov.

Willingboro Jazz Festival- Celebrating 30 Years of Musical Excellence

By Kendall Brunson

Wow! Can you believe the Township of Willingboro is hosting its 30th Jazz Festival on August 18, 2013? The Willingboro Jazz Festival was founded by Saxophonist Billy Keil and Trumpeter Bill O'Donnell in the early 80's with a vision of bringing Jazz to the "Community Stage" in a festival style that had never been seen in our area before. The Jazz Fest began in the Willingboro Plaza now the Willingboro Town Center. The Festival moved to Broido Park in 1984 and was held there until it moved to its current location in Millcreek Park in 1995. Through the history of this memorable event many great musicians have graced the Jazz Fest Stage, the Charlie Mingus Big Band, The Woody Herman Orchestra, Jeff Lorber, Gerald Veasley, Sean Jones, John Faddis, Charles Fambrough, Cintron, D-for, Exit 45, Larry McKenna, Dennis Diblasio, Jeff Bradshaw, Bootsy Barnes, Michael Pedicin, Urban Quadra Band, Spyro Gyra, Angela Bofil, TruVibe, Fresh Fire, the Willingboro High School Jazz Band and a slew of other notable performers.

Marathon Explosion

By Mason Moton IV

Reality of America's vulnerability to terroristic attack has hit the street, of America's Mainstream. On April 14th, 2013 while thousands were running in Boston's annual Marathon, two pressure cooker bombs that exploded sent a shockwave across the nation. What was meant to be a run for health, community, and wellness became a disaster. The accumulated death toll of 3 and countless injuries raised an acute sense of social awareness. This rise has been evident since the shooting in Arizona, where a young girl was a victim. One may give the title of "The Snow Ball Effect" to the recent events. Currently there is a sense of Vigilance in the whole of American cities, towns, schools, and alike. Congressman and Senators are being pressured by angry, grieving parents, students, friends, and various siblings. It is obvious that a change in general law is coming soon – even with the resistance by profiting members of the current laws and policies. Most Americans are faced with 2 dilemmas in the present times – do something or do nothing.

From the Desk of Dr. James E. Ayer

I have discovered that over the last few years I have become addicted to watching natural disasters on television. I could not stop looking at the terrible tragedy in Moore, Oklahoma this past May and it was the same way with hurricane Katrina a few years ago.

Maybe it is because the same kind of things doesn't happen in New Jersey; the size of the tornado, the immense black cloud that kept coming and coming. There was this sense of inevitability, but at the same time a hope that it would just stop and not destroy the towns, and kill people in its path.

Then there was hurricane Sandy and the nor'easter it joined on the New Jersey and New York coasts. I was fascinated by the weather reports that predicted the hurricane would come up the coast and make a sharp left hand turn inland. My sister has a home on Long Beach Island and I desperately wanted to see the television coverage that would tell me what was going to happen there and in New York City. I watched, captivated as the water kept inching upon dry land in New York. And then we lost the television signal.

I shared Governor Christie's disappointment as he toured the Seaside Heights boardwalk. My dad and some friends had a cottage and we spent our summer vacations there when I was young. I played skill ball and rode the merry-go-round; it was crushing to see a part of my life disappear into the Atlantic.

I guess one of the things that surprised me most was the way the responders came in and took over. Just imagine, there are actually people whose profession is to clean up after tornadoes. They come in when there is still a possibility that people are still alive under all the debris. First responders are skilled in knowing how to dispose of things in such a way that people who may still be alive can be found and rescued.

And so, my thoughts naturally turned to Willingboro. We didn't have the same damage they had along the coast but there were trees and electrical wires down, and power outages all over the town. How did we cope with it?

Well, we have a very competent group of volunteers, an Emergency Management group led by John Carrol, who spring into action at the very warning of such a problem. John has probably been around as long as I have been on Council and that's quite a while. In previous columns I have sung the praises of our Directors but I've never mentioned him before. Now I will tell you, John is as competent as the best of them.

Understand that this position is not a cushy job to which you can assign just anybody. When a state of emergency is proclaimed, the Director of Emergency Management takes over the town. He can tell the Township Manager what to do and, as far as the emergency is concerned, he can tell the Director of Public Safety what to do. And he can do all this because he has had years of training and, when trouble starts; he knows exactly which steps to take. And he's not alone. He has the CERT team, a group of volunteers certified to carry out his emergency management needs.

Hurricane Sandy landed on the New Jersey coast at Brigantine on Monday, October 29, 2012. John's team was on duty and ready to face the night. During the evening, they came very close to declaring a state of emergency and possibly ordering the mandatory evacuation of some streets. They decided not to so and rode out the storm.

And so I humbly offer a belated thanks to John and his team. All Willingboro should be grateful that we have a group of qualified citizens ready to come to our aid when emergencies threaten.

This column is devoted to issues that affect preserving the quality of life for residents and businesses in the Township of Willingboro. The ideas presented in the article are strictly his own and do not necessarily represent the position of the Township Council nor are they the official position of the Township.

“The Willingboro Community News is published by the Township for the residents and businesses of the community.”

Have you read that caption on our cover? Those words have served to announce the mission; intent and purpose, of our community newspaper.

We have attempted to spark residential interest in the newspaper of Willingboro Township by opening the doors for thoughts from readers, requesting recipes to be shared throughout the Township, being on the look-out for community heroes and availing opportunity for residents to share articles for the readers of our community newspaper.

While we are yet in our infantile stage it is most needful to make known the fact that businesses are a major part of our community. We want business owners to have a share in our newspaper. What types of businesses exist in our awesome Township? There are medical facilities, doctors, lawyers and realtors within Willingboro Township. We have market places, strip malls, private entry businesses; to list a few. Where does your business fit in our lives?

Expose your business to the community. Become a highlighted business, or advertise your business in our quarterly newspaper. With forethought your business advertisement can serve, at the least, as a two-fold purpose. It can draw people to your location, and a little business savvy can be used for that ad to be a means of measuring to determine the advertisement worth. You know: bring this coupon and receive a bottle of free water during the months of July, August, and September. Use your imagination. You know your capabilities and your business. The goal is for the community newspaper to serve as a vehicle for the residents to get to know your business and keep businesses in the sitting rooms of our residents.

Once you have invested in your business by advertising in our community newspaper you will see residents of Willingboro shopping at your business!

Interested in discussing future business highlights, or do you have an interest in advertising? Emails may be sent to: newspaper@willingboronj.gov or write: Editor-at-Large – Municipal Complex-One Rev.-Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Drive – Willingboro, NJ 08046
